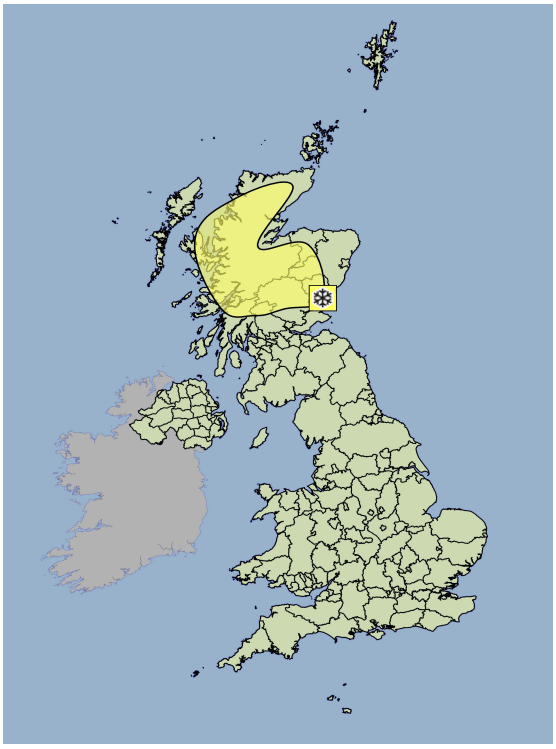
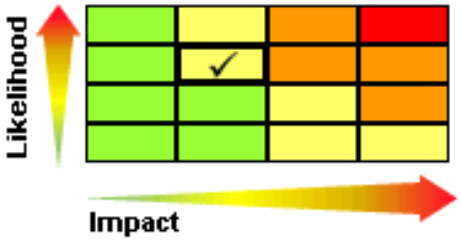
National Severe Weather Warning Service





CANCELLED

Chief Forecasters Assessment
A cold front moving through the area on Friday will bring colder conditions in, then a wave on this front tomorrow will allow rain to come back in, turning readily to snow on high ground. Heavier, more persistent rain will chill the air to allow snow down to low levels locally. This warning will continue to be kept under review, and there remains more than average uncertainty in the track, intensity and elevation of snow areas.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Snow

Valid from 11:00 on Sat, 16th Mar 2013 until 09:00 on Sun, 17th Mar 2013

An area of rain, with snow on high ground, will spread across the region on Saturday. On ground above 200-300m, snow accumulations of 4-8 cm are possible, especially in Highland on Saturday night. Some wet snow may well fall to low levels with the risk of of 2-5cm in places.

As drier conditions push in later Saturday and overnight, icy stretches could develop widely on untreated roads.

The public are advised to be aware of these wintry hazards.
